

PRISON BREAK

Prison Break

Overview

Prison Break is an intense game where two to four prisoners (players) compete in a race for freedom.

The game ends when the first player to get enough reputation (rep) points and gang members is able to steal four escape items from the guard towers and escape the prison.

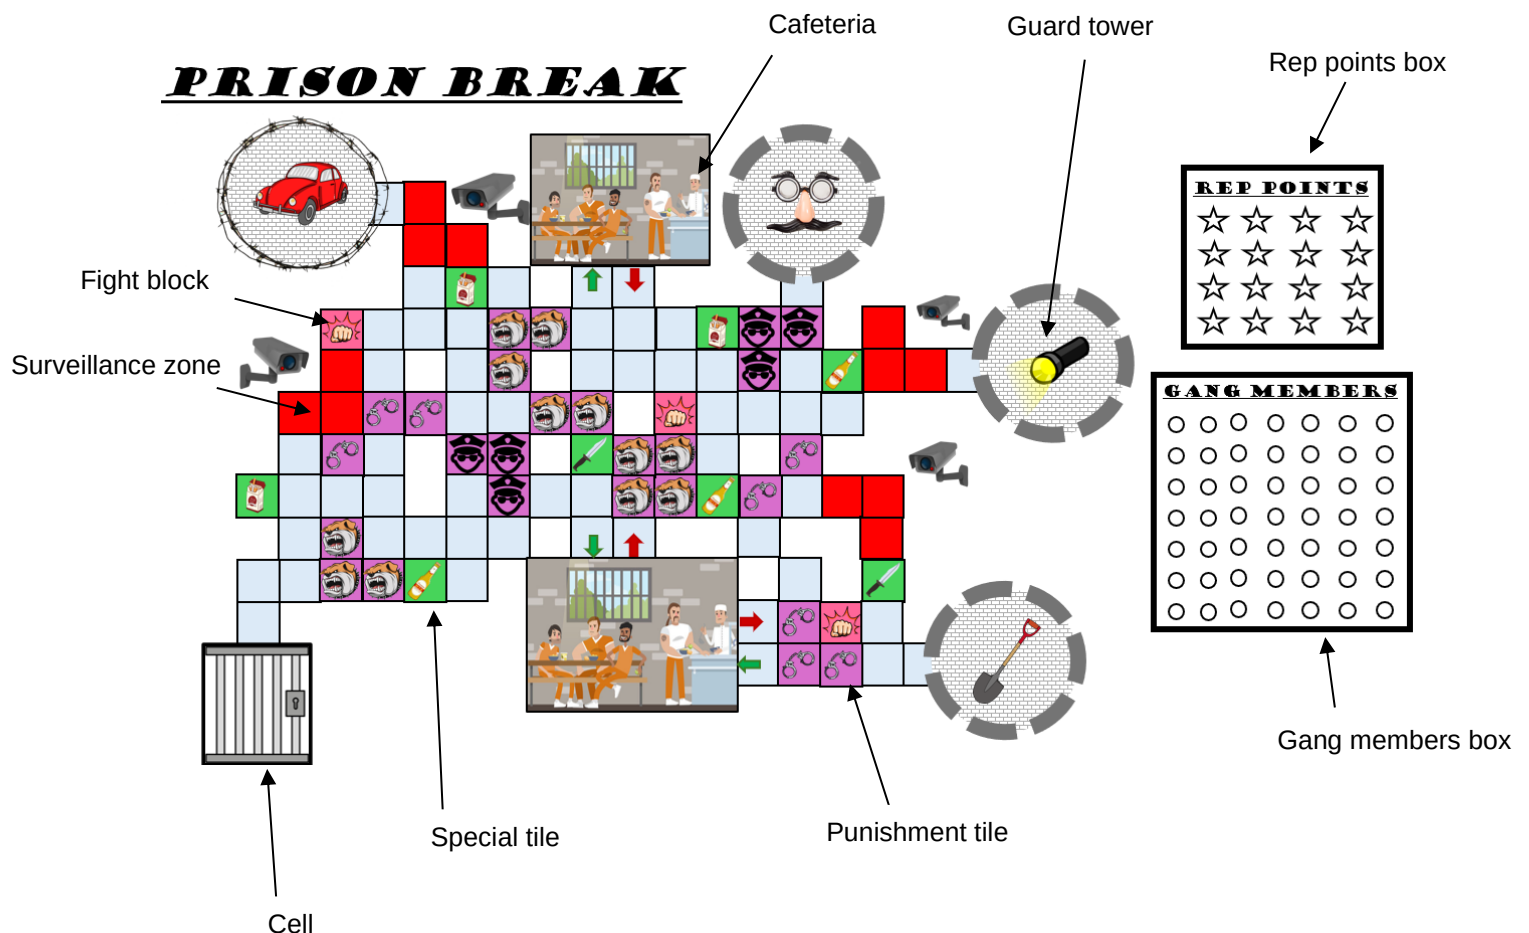

Objective

Collect all four escape items from the guard towers.

Components

- Dice (D4, D6, D8, D9 and D12)
- Game sheet (one for each player)
- Markers

RULES

How players move around the board:

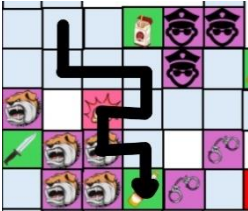

All players start in the prison cell.

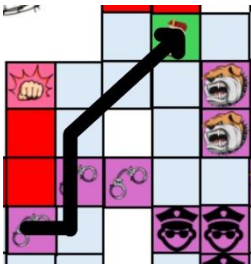

Each round begins with any one of the players rolling the D8.

All players then move according to the number rolled. Players must move the full number indicated on the dice (unless they have 10 rep points and are trying to get into the cafeteria. See below.)

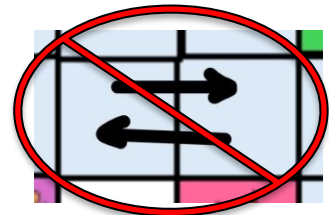

Players can move in any pattern or direction, except diagonally.

Once players have 12 reputation points, they can also move diagonally.

Players may not leave a tile and then immediately return to that same tile within the round. In other words, a player can't go back and forth between two tiles.

During each round, players can aim to finish their move on any of the special tiles, cafeterias and guard towers to gain rep points, gang members and escape items respectively.

Beware of the punishment tiles though...

Once all players have completed their move and any tasks within that round, the next round can begin.

Landing on special green tiles to collect reputation points

Players must collect reputation (rep) points to build their gang and overpower the guard towers.

Players collect rep points by ending their move on a special green tile (showing beer bottles, knives, and cigarettes).

Each tile is worth 2 rep points.

Keep track of points in the “rep points” box on the game sheet.

Once players have collected rep points from a tile, they must cross out the tile; they cannot collect points from that tile again.

Landing on cafeterias to recruit gang members

Before a player can break into the guard towers to steal escape items, they need to recruit gang members in the cafeterias.

Enter the cafeteria following the “In” arrow.

Players with fewer than 10 rep points must roll the exact number of moves needed to enter.

Players with 10+ rep points can enter the cafeteria even if they have excess moves on the dice.

Once in the cafeteria, during that same round, the player rolls a dice to determine how many gang members they will gain.

The dice the player rolls is determined by the amount of reputation points that player has.

0-3 rep points	D4
4-7 rep points	D6
8-11 rep points	D8
12+ rep points	D12

Keep track of gang members gained in the “gang members” box on your game sheet.

In the next round, exit the cafeteria through the tile marked with an exit arrow.

No player can stay in the cafeteria for the subsequent round.

Fight blocks

Scattered around the prison are pink fight blocks, where players can engage in gang fights.

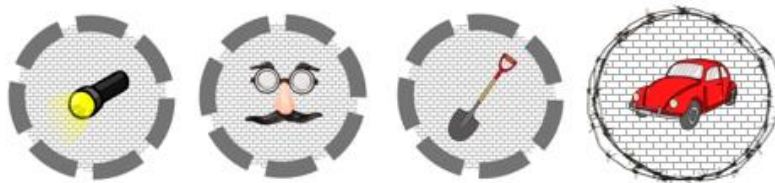

Landing on a fight block allows the player to steal half the gang members that any other player had when they came into the round. (Gang members collected during the round aren't included in the theft.)

If a player being stolen from has an odd number of gang members, they lose half of their gang members, rounded down. For example, if the player has 11 gang members, they lose 5.

Attacking the guard towers

During any round, a player can try their luck and attack one of the four guard towers, if they feel they have collected enough gang members.

Each guard tower contains one of the four items that must be collected before making an escape: a flashlight, a disguise, a shovel, and a car.

Guard towers can be collected in any order, as long as the getaway car is collected LAST.

Throw the exact number of moves needed to enter the tower in that round.

Once inside, and in the same round, roll the D9 to determine the number of guards guarding the tower.

If the player's gang size is equal to or greater than the guard troop size rolled by the D9:

- that player successfully breaks in and collects the escape item, losing gang members equal to the number of guards.

If the player's gang is smaller than the guard troop size rolled by the D9:

- the guards overpower that player and they lose all their gang members and return to their cell.

Punishment tiles

During a move, be sure to avoid the punishment tiles (purple tiles) scattered around the prison.

Players can cross these tiles during their move, but if they end the round on one of these tiles, they will get these penalties:

- Guard dog tiles: lose two rep points.
- Police tiles: lose two rep points.
- Handcuff tiles: the player is immediately arrested and must go back to their starting cell.
- Camera tiles: landing on any of the red camera tiles triggers surveillance. If the next round's roll is even, move half of the number rolled during that round. If the roll was odd, proceed normally.

The end of each round

Once all players have completed their move and any tasks within that round, the next round can begin.

End of the game

The first player to collect the getaway car, after collecting the flashlight, disguise, and shovel from the guard towers, wins.

In the event of a tie, the winner is determined by reputation points.
